The company is taking this means of protecting the public against possible accidents which might occur when so many people are here during the fruit season. Jas. Smith began his duties as flagman Tuesday.

Uncle Sam Robbed

Early Monday morning the local post-office was entered by burglars and looted of between $7 and $8 in change and stamps. Entrance was made through the lobby by means of a heavy chisel and hammer which had been stolen from the blacksmith shop of J. C. Lloyd on the opposite side of the street. The door frame was sprung so that the door opened.

Postmistress Waite had removed most of the money from the till leaving nothing larger than quarters and smaller change with a few stamps. The man on the inside had evidently passed the cash and stamps out through the postal order window which was left open and the drawer left on the desk.

Soap cups were placed at the tops of the safe doors and the seams packed with soap to retain the nitro-glycerine. No mail sacks were used to deaden the sound as has been reported. The job was such a poor one that but slight damage was done to the safe doors and the bolts were slightly sprung and the would be safe blowers were not even successful in forcing the outer doors.

Night watchman Langdon of J. C. Ainsley Packing Co. while on his rounds saw a man near the alley back of the Curry Block in which the postoffice is located, at about 1:35 and shortly after heard the report and just a few minutes later heard an auto start on Harrison Avenue just north of there.

When Mrs. F. O. Putnam, deputy postmistress, came to the office at 6:45 in the morning, she found the door and window open and discovered what had been done. She immediately notified Mrs. Waite who phoned at once to Inspector W. I. Madeira who was on his vacation at the home of his father-in-law, L. Woodard, on Los Gatos road.

No clue is left on which the officers may work.

HOUSE DESTROYED

Wednesday morning about one o'clock fire broke out in the residence of R. B. Nicholas on Harrison avenue, and in half-an-hour had reduced it to ruins. Mr. Nicholas was sleeping on the rear porch and was awakened by the crash of the window near him which was broken out by the terrible heat.

The house was almost entirely ablaze inside before it was discovered by the watchman at the Ainsley Cannery across the street. The alarm was sounded and a number of men gathered to do what they could to save adjoining buildings. The motor pump at the cannery was started and by the use of it the T. L. Sharp residence on the south was saved with but a bad scorching on the outside and probably the business blocks along Campbell avenue which are near by.

For some time no one present knew where the chemical engine was to be found and when Jas. Kelly arrived he led a party to it back of the Farmers Union. When the engine was brought the fire was too far advanced to check with it.

Mrs. Nicholas and son had gone to Santa Barbara a few days before and the few of their clothes they had with them were saved. Mr. Nicholas saved but the suit of clothes he had worn the day before and an overcoat. He was unable to take anything from inside as the fire was in every room before discovered. Eighty dollars in paper money was burned. The house and furniture were partially covered by insurance. The origin of the fire is not known as Mr. Nicholas had been eating at the Coffee Club and no fire has been used in the house, since his wife's departure.

Prof. Snow Elected

The local high school board met Wednesday evening and elected Professor Irving Snow to the principalship of the school. Mr. Snow has been connected with the school for a time and is thoroughly acquainted with the pupils and their work.

There were about forty applications for the position and many of them with the best of recommendations.

Some even offered to come here at a lower salary than they were getting before which speaks well for the popularity of the town and location.

A number of applications for the position formerly held by Prof. Snow have been received but no action has been taken.

Colored Crepe Tissue and shelf papers at the Press office.

Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Whitman, Mrs. and Miss Sykes and Miss Davis returned from their vacation at Yosemite, Friday. Mr. Whitman stated that a most pleasant time was had. While there he joined the fire brigade that fought fire at Camp Curry. "The trip," Mr. Whitman said, "is one of the best for a moderate expense that any one can take and one long to be remembered." He thinks that as yet autos should not be allowed inside the park because of the narrow roads.

Battle Ground To Be Near Here

Santa Clara valley will be the battle ground for the joint regular army and militia maneuvers which will be fought for the defense of San Francisco between two armies comprising nearly 8000 soldiers, between August 10 and 23. Infantry, field artillery, cavalry, signal corps and hospital detachments of the regular army and militia of California, Arizona and Utah will figure in the action.

The invading army, which has been designated the "blue" force, will be landed from imaginary transports on Monterey bay and will establish a base at Salinas. It will be the intention of the commander to march north for the purpose of attacking San Francisco and gain possession of the fortifications of the harbor.

News of the invasion will be conveyed to Washington, and the war department will order all the troops it can quickly assemble to proceed south and intercept the progress of the hostile foreign foe until more troops can be mobilized. The "red" army will leave the Presidio on the night of Aug. 11. Both forces will be subject to forced marching, in the hope of gaining strategical positions. Plenty of blank ammunition will be supplied the soldiers and the valley between Gilroy and San Jose will resound with the boom of cannon and the rattle of musketry.

Both armies will have scouts, patrolling parties, outposts and pickets far in advance of their main forces, and these will be engaged in action several days before the two armies clash. The battle for the defense of San Francisco, it is estimated, will last at least two days and nights.

This will be the largest maneuver ever held on this coast and is part of the scheme of the general staff of the war department for the defense of the Pacific coast. The problem to be worked out follows closely the idea suggested by General Homer Lee in his book, "The Valor of Ignorance". Lee in his book wrote on the possible invasion by Japan of the Pacific coast and pictured a large Japanese army landing at Monterey bay and marching northward to attack San Francisco.

According to orders, the "blue" invading army will be composed of the following troops:

Seventh infantry, California militia, from the vicinity of Los Angeles, commanded by Colonel W. G. Schrieber; Fifth infantry, California militia, from the vicinity of San Francisco and including the two San Jose companies, commanded by Colonel D. A. Smith; Twelfth United States infantry, from Monterey; battery of field artillery from Utah; one company of signal corps from Utah; two troops of cavalry from Bakersfield and Los Angeles, California militia; five companies infantry, Arizona militia; two batteries field artillery, California militia, and hospital and signal organizations of the regular army.

The "red" army defending San Francisco will be composed of the following:

Second infantry, California militia, commanded by Colonel Len Bond from Sacramento valley; Sixth United States infantry and Sixteenth United States infantry, both from the presidio, San Francisco; Battery B, field artillery, from Oakland; two troops of militia cavalry from this state, and Company B, signal corps, militia, from San Francisco.

Regular army officers of high rank will command the two forces, while a higher ranking officer, representing the war department, with a staff of officers will act as chief umpire.

The troops assigned to the invading army will be sent direct to the base at Salinas from their home stations, while the defending force will be mobilized in San Francisco. The latter will camp on the golf links in the presidio before starting south.

With their base at Salinas the invaders will fight their way north via Castroville, Sargent, Miller, Camadero, Gilroy, San Martin, Morgan Hill, Madrone, Peary, Coyote, and Edenvale. In all probability the first skirmish will begin around Madrone and the two armies will come together at either Edenvale or Hillsdale, just south of San Jose.

Adjutant-General E. A. Forbes held a conference early in the week with the colonels of the different militia regiments with their quarter-masters at the St. Francis hotel. Among those who were present were: Brigadier-General Robert Wankowski, Major G. E. Heber, Colonel W. G. Schrieber, Captain A. B. Austin, Major John L. Sherburne, Captain Luke Howe, Colonel D. A. Smith, and Captain Charles Peterson.

CLINKER'S BAD RECORD

WHY QUIGWAY REFUSED TO HELP HIS ELECTION.

Declares Candidate Entirely Lacking in Moral Character and Proves It by the Episode of the Cow.

"Quigway," said Weatherwax, "we want to elect Clinker alderman from this ward. He's the finest kind of a man, stands strong for the uplift and all that sort of thing, but he always has refused to have anything to do with politics. However, we need him, and if the matter is placed before him in the right way he'll consent to run. A committee of leading citizens of the ward will call on him this evening, and we want you to go along and help us persuade him to make the race."

"Well, you can count me out," replied Quigway. "I haven't any use for Clinker, and I think our institutions have come to a Dickens of a pass when such a man is even suggested for public office. Clinker is entirely lacking in moral character, and it will be an evil day for the people when he goes into office."

"You're talking through your turban, Quigway. Why, Clinker has a spotless record. You can't find a flaw in it anywhere."

"Well, that shows all you know, and if you elect Clinker I'll move out of this ward and stay out. I couldn't sleep at night if that man was in office."

"Two years ago I was looking around for a good, respectable family cow, the kind you read about in Sun-School books. I didn't know anything about cows, except that they gave milk under proper conditions, and we wanted real milk in our house. Clinker heard that I was in the market for a cow, and he came over to my place and told me he had the very animal I wanted. I had the utmost faith in him at that time and placed myself entirely in his hands. I told him candidly that I didn't know a cow from a canal boat, so far as practical information went, and asked him, as man to man, to give me a square deal."

"He placed his hand on his heart and swore by his grandmother's nutmeg grater that the cow he was offering for sale was perfectly refined and ladylike, and that she gave an abundance of real milk. So I took him at his word, Weatherwax, and counted out 50 large, gun metal dollars, which represented the savings of months. He brought the cow over and tied her in my shed, and in the evening I went forth with a beautiful new tin bucket and sat down to milk her. The next thing I knew I was standing on my shoulderblades, and that handsome new tin bucket was flattened against the roof of the shed. I never saw a cow as ambidextrous with her hind legs—and Clinker said she was so tame the children could play with her!"

"I went over to his place, my blood boiling with indignation, and he went back home with me and surveyed the scene of the uprising, and had the nerve to say that the cow kicked because I sat at her left side instead of her right side, when I began to milk! As though a cow cared for such technicalities! That's the sort of a man Clinker is. He's a sea lawyer, who would rather argue far-fetched points than be just and fair. I wanted him to take the cow back, but he wouldn't do it. The cow was just as he represented her, he said, and the fault was all mine. That's the way he'll conduct himself if he breaks into the council. He'll say the fault is with the people who elected him, if anything goes wrong."

"A week after I bought that cow she quit giving milk altogether. She didn't give any more milk than a lumber wagon, and Clinker had assured me that she would keep the family supplied for a year. I went to him and read the riot act, and he asked a lot of foot questions and then took refuge in technicalities again. He said the cow went dry because I milked her at all hours of the day. Did you ever hear anything like that? There wasn't a clock in the barn and the cow didn't carry a chronometer, and it made no difference to her when I milked her. And that's the kind of a man you want to elect as alderman!"

"When you place the destinies of this town in the hands of men of that character it is time for good citizens to hike for the tall timber."—Chicago News.

The Housekeeping Money.
Two navies working on a job some distance away from their homes had been paid, and were sauntering down the main street of the village in which they were lodging. Passing the post office, a thought struck one of them, and he darted inside, to return with a sixpenny postal order in his hand.

"What," said the other, in some surprise, "do you go in for competitions, Bill?"

"Competitions?" queried Bill. "What do yer mean?"

"Why, missing words, and that sort of thing," was the reply.
"Missing words be blowed!" said Bill, indignantly. "Can't a fellow send a bit of money home to his wife?"—London Tit-Bits.

Health & Beauty Hints

By Katherine Morton

Girls of sixteen and even younger often write me for complexion formulas and I always feel like saying the same thing to them all:

"My dear children, you have it in your own hands to possess not only a good, but very likely a beautiful, complexion."

And if I did say this thing I should be speaking the absolute truth.

Now let us consider the complexion defects which afflict so many girls between the ages of twelve and eighteen. Pimples, oily skin and large pores are the chiefest ones, and these are largely attributable to unhygienic habits. The proof of the statement is that girls who are looked after very carefully and who are warned by their mothers against mental excitement, rarely have them. Left to their own judgments about their health, the girls with complexion worries have neglected their bowels, ignored the importance of the hot bath, been lazy about exercise, have eaten coarse or highly seasoned foods, have drunk too much ice water, have slept in close rooms and done everything else they ought not to have done. Of what benefit to these young ostriches would cosmetics be? Their heads are buried in the sand of ignorance as to the needs of their own little bodies, and there is nothing to do but wake up their understanding as to the operations of nature herself.

There is that much abused organ, the liver, to which is intrusted so many of the chemical processes of the body. If it is clogged through having too much work thrown upon it as in gourmandizing or when deprived of the mechanical action needed to stimulate the flow of its juices, as in a sedentary life, it is not ordinary waste matter which is thrown back into the blood, but foreign products which no organ knows what to do with. It is this condition, the existence of poisonous matter, which gives rise to so many complexion defects, and when the liver is so clogged there is nothing to do but give the system a complete clearing out. An innocent little dose of castor oil, bought at the drug store for ten cents and doctored with five drops of brandy to keep it from griping, will start the liver to a better action through freely moving the bowels. The oil must be taken on an empty stomach, on going to bed, and the next morning it is wise to take a bottle of citrate of magnesia to start the movement of the intestines and further clear them.

A diet of laxative foods after this will continue the good work of keeping the bowels in easy order, all fresh fruits, cooked rhubarb, cooked and raw prunes, spinach and greens coming under this head. As a beautifier to the skin, and a gentle laxative, molasses, too, is unequalled, but it is necessary to get the very dark, rich kind and eat it with coarse bread, such as graham and rye, whose rough grain is very beneficial in clearing the bowels. A sufficient quantity of pure drinking water between meals, this taken hot or cold, is required, and if a squeeze of lemon juice is added to the hot water at least once a day the complexion is further cleared. Other drinks of a freshening sort to the skin might be sassafras and spearmint tea. The sassafras is prepared by steeping the roots in boiling water, and the infusion may be taken hot or cold.

This getting of the bowels in good order and keeping them so with fresh foods and drinking water is required for the preliminary treatment of every skin trouble—pimples, large pores, oily condition, discolorations and sallowness. Even freckles, those teasing little skin sprites which are so hard to banish, are more easily dispersed and dimmed if the bowels are cleared first.

As to other foods useful for clearing the complexion, milk, sweet and sour, is undoubtedly beautifying, milk possessing the lactic acid which bleaches the skin, and being about the most natural of all foods to the stomach. Sweet butter is also preferable to salt, while a liberal diet of green salads, prepared with olive oil and lemon juice, through the help they give in the digesting of heavier foods, is certainly to be recommended. The anaemic girl who needs all the nourishment she can get should, however take her salad with mayonnaise, which is in a way quite solid food and easily digested as well. In fact, the more olive oil the thin, pale girl takes the better, and it would do her far more good than harm if she consumed, besides, four raw eggs a day.

PROPER SELECTION OF BROOD SOW FOR PRODUCTION OF PORK

Regardless of Breed, Animal Should Possess Certain Definite Characteristics Typifying Combination of Good Breeding With Individual Excellence—Hints for Summer Care.

A Berkshire Champion.

(By R. G. WEATHERSTONE.)

The brood sow is the unit of pork production. Regardless of her breed she should have certain definite characteristics typifying a happy combination of good breeding with individual excellence. The easiest and most expensive method of embarking in the swine breeding business is to purchase two or more pure-bred gilts, safe in pig to unrelated sires, to be used as foundation stock. Selection of the best females from their progeny and mating them to a useful growthy quality male will establish within a very short time a high-class herd. In selecting a sow for breeding purposes the following points should be emphasized:

1. The gilt should be pure bred; a typical utility representative of her breed.
2. Should trace to a large, even litter, farrowed by a kindly disposed, heavy milking dam that displays vigor, quality and symmetry.
3. She should evidence early maturity; possess a clean, shapely head, large, bright eyes, heavy jaws, light jowl, neat ears, short neck; have a long, straight, strong back, broad, meaty loin, smooth, compact shoulders, deep, well arched sides; even width, plump, shapely hams, a neat trim underline, dotted with many evenly placed rudimentaries; short, straight legs, with clean, dense bone; stand upright on strong, well supported pasterns, and exhibit style and finish throughout.

4. She should be a pasture product rather than pen-fed, chubby pet.

5. She should possess quality; be in a vigorous growthy condition, free from wrinkles, and giving promise of development of flesh in region of valuable cuts, thus yielding a higher dressing percentage of edible pork.

In order that we may take proper care of the young pigs it is necessary that we know about what time to expect them.

I have made it a rule to keep a record of the date on which the sows are bred.

By reference to my record I find that my sows farrow from the one hundred and twelfth to the one hundred and fifteenth day from breeding. Some claim that an old sow will go longer than a young sow, but I bred a yearling sow, a two-year-old, and a six-year-old sow all on the same date. These three sows all farrowed on the same day.

I like for my sows to be into a thriving condition when the pigs are farrowed. In fact, I like for them to improve in flesh during the entire period of gestation.

Some people are afraid of getting their sows too fat, and I suppose that they can be made too fat, but they ought to be in good flesh. They should have a surplus laid up for the suckling of the young pigs, because it is hard to keep a sow from going down in flesh rapidly while the pigs have to depend upon her for their food.

Middle White Sow, Walton Rose 69th, First at Royal Show, Liverpool.

The sows are given separate lots, with a good shelter, close, warm house, if the weather is cool, about a week before they are due to farrow. The sows are fed sparingly for a few days after farrowing, then gradually brought up to a full ration.

It has always been hard for me to keep from feeding the sow too much while the pigs are young, and as a result I have had several cases of scours with the young pigs.

When I find the pigs beginning to scour, I give the sow 15 to 20 drops of laudanum in her feed for a few feeds. Her feed is reduced and this usually checks the scours in a day or so. If I have not any laudanum I have used powdered charcoal with good results.

As soon as the pigs are old enough to eat I give them a separate trough where they can eat without being disturbed by the mother. They are given a mixed feed of middlings, corn meal or other ground feed mixed with water. The sow gets a similar ration. More corn is used in cold weather than if the season is warm.

LITTLE SPARROW PEST DESTROYER

English Bird May Be Used Against
Alfalfa Weevil in the West—
Experiments Are to Be Made.

The English sparrow, originally imported into this country to destroy insect pests, but known chiefly in recent years as a pest of other birds, may come into its own again, according to the officials of the government biological survey. It has been found that the sparrow is a vigorous enemy of the alfalfa weevil, an evil which threatens to spread throughout the entire alfalfa farming territory of the west as the cotton boll weevil has spread in the south. So far the weevil has appeared only in Utah and part of Wyoming, but a dozen other states, it is said, will be affected within a few years unless a real enemy of the pest is introduced to fight it.

The biological survey is planning to experiment with other birds this summer and will not recommend that the English sparrow be sent into the alfalfa territory unless no other effective enemy of the weevil can be found. The bureau of entomology has received from its agent in Italy a number of parasites which feed on the alfalfa weevil and these will be sent to Utah at once.

Protecting Sheep From Dogs.
A Minnesota farmer says that he keeps dogs away from his flock by putting in his pasture the dummy of a man holding a stick for a gun. This dummy is taken down every morning, and put up again in the evening at different places from night to night. He says a sheep-killing dog will not go near enough to the dummy to discover that it is a bogus man.

Size of Farms.
Our farms are decreasing in size, the average number of acres in farms having decreased from 146 in 1900 to 138 in 1910.

GIVE HERD BULL PLENTY EXERCISE

Important to Keep Animal Strong and Vigorous—Various Ways of Giving Him Needed Work.

It is very important that the bull at the head of a herd be given plenty of exercise, and be fed like a work horse, as in this manner he becomes strong and vigorous, and a sure calf getter.

On the other hand, if a bull be deprived of exercise and the proper kind of feed and becomes indolent, lacking energy, especially breeding energy, he is rendered almost valueless; in fact, he becomes a detriment to a herd, owing to the fact that a breeder is losing valuable time by repeatedly breeding his cows to him without results.

The various ways of exercising a bull might consist in a paddock to run in, a tread power to work in, or being chained up and staked. At any rate, it is important to conceive some manner in which to give the herd bull plenty of daily exercise, as the results of good feed and plenty of exercise may be plainly noticeable in the offspring.

The New Way.
This is the modern idea of cow management—to first have a cow of largest possible dairy capacity, know what her capacity to convert food into milk is, and feed up to the capacity and no more. In your herd that you are feeding all alike it may be possible that two cows of limited capacity are wasting food that one may be in need of to do her best work. Are you underfeeding good cows and overfeeding poor ones?

Cut Off Diseased Wood.
Diseased wood on a tree can never be made new again. Cut it off and allow another shoot to grow. Every day that such wood remains on a tree adds to the liability of losing it.

Deaf Mutes Fling Epithets in Court

NEW YORK.—There was a silent commotion of an extraordinary character before Magistrate Krotel in Center street court the other day when Henry J. Hecker, a deaf-mute pressman of 754 East One Hundred and Fifty-second street, appeared as complainant against Miss Nora Sullivan, a young woman of twenty, also a deaf-mute, of 330 Water street. Hecker charged that Miss Sullivan grossly insulted him on the street last Saturday afternoon, flinging a broadside of slanderous epithets at him from the tips of her fingers and then banging him on the head with an umbrella.

The young woman, who is short and plump and highstrung, appeared in court in answer to a summons obtained by Hecker.

There was no deaf-mute interpreter in court when the case was called and Magistrate Krotel was at a loss to understand the multitude of high signs that were snapped at him. Hecker vainly talked himself into a state of manual palsy, and court attendants were sent scurrying everywhere for an interpreter. Finally Police Sergeant Quackenbos, who is six feet tall and built like a hack, was reached at police headquarters and came down to court while the quiet excitement was at its height.

Complainant Hecker was pretty weak in the wrists when he took the stand and related how he had been insulted and thrashed with the umbrella. Quackenbos did not translate the insults, but informed the court that in thumb and digit discourse the language was pretty fierce.

Then Miss Sullivan took the stand and talked so fast that Quackenbos couldn't get her. He told the magistrate she was having a fit of manual hysterics. He made swimming motions at the witness, wig-wagging for her to become calm. There was a great stillness in the court and at the same time a great tumult. All the deaf-mutes were talking at once and becoming purple in the face.

At last Miss Sullivan talked herself into a swoon and was carried to an ante-room. Brought out again, she talked herself into another swoon and came out of No. 2 quite limp. Then it was drawn from her that Hecker had made unpleasant left-handed remarks to her and that she was entirely justified in swinging at him with her umbrella.

"I guess this is all we can stand for one day," adjudged the court, mopping his brow. "Case dismissed."

As the two silent factions fled out of the courtroom there was a wireless riot in the corridors until the mammoth Sergeant Quackenbos intervened and waved them apart.

Man Dies After Fifty Years' Silence

DIGBY, NOVA SCOTIA.—Within a few hundred yards of a beach where 51 years ago two fishermen found him with his legs amputated, "Gerome," Nova Scotia's man of mystery, died a few days ago, silent to the end about his identity.

Although he undoubtedly possessed the power of speech, "Gerome" had not conversed with anyone in the half century he had been cared for by Didier Comeau and the latter's sons and daughters. During all of this time "Gerome" had remained a mystery to the settlers here, most of whom are known as "returned Arcadians," being the descendants of the compatriots of Evangeline who returned to this part of their adopted country after their expulsion by the English in 1755.

Away back in the summer of 1861, according to tradition, a ship different from those usually seen here put off a small boat which made for the shore and deposited above the tide line an object that several hours later was discovered to be a man. His legs had been freshly amputated and there was a jug of water and a package of ship's biscuit beside the man, who had suffered greatly from exposure.

Wrapped in blankets and taken to the Comeau house, where, ever since he has been a welcome member of the household, the man was finally revived by a physician. In half a dozen languages the man was asked:

"What is your name?" To this question, in Italian, propounded by the elder Comeau, the man made muttered reply: "Gerome!" Never after that, however, did "Gerome" utter a word except on one occasion when asked where he came from. "Trieste" was the reply made, seemingly in an unguarded moment.

Physicians from all parts of the world, who have visited this Land of Evangeline in the 51 summers that have elapsed since "Gerome" was found on the beach, have studied the man's case. Most of them have agreed that he might have spoken had he decided to do so; one or two have vouchsafed the opinion that some terrible experience through which "Gerome" passed frightened him out of his senses and rendered him unable to utter an intelligible word.

Girls to Enforce Hat Pin Ordinance

CHICAGO.—Thieves to catch thieves, and women to catch women. If he first, why not the second?

So reasons John McWeeny, chief of police. And since it sounded good to the head of Chicago's police department thereupon outlined his plans for a regular beauty squad.

Regular beauty squad, and he same pointed reasons, coupled with an old ordinance that never has been done, will inspire the 20 girls he hopes to enlist in the service.

"You see, my men are bashful," explained the chief. "And men are any way. Now if you were standing on the corner and a pink cheeked girl strolled by with the points of her hat pins sticking out a foot, would you arrest her?"

"No, you'd probably wink your eye at your brother officer and say, 'No, no, my no—she ain't breakin' the law.' So you see, we've just got to have girls to catch girls—a regular beauty squad."

Then when the woman with the hat pins strolls by, a fashionably dressed girl, wearing a tiny star where she formerly wore the pin of her sorority, will touch her on the shoulder and suggest that, "The captain wants you."

And herein lies just one fear that may wreck the proposed beauty squad before its organization.

What if the woman shouts: "What for?" and the beauty policeman says: "Your hat pins are too long; they stick out too far; you are under arrest;" will the arrested one cry "Leave me alone or I'll scratch your eyes out?"

Will this be followed by a real hair-pulling contest? And will the original gentleman policeman have to cry "break," stop the argument, and take both fighters for a ride in the blue wagon?

These are questions experience alone can solve. And Chief McWeeny says he will take a chance on the battles just to try out his plan.

Coed Throws Her Own Effigy on Pyre

ST. LOUIS.—Passengers on a Market street car passing the western end of Forest Park saw a girl trudging along the tracks with what appeared to be the lifeless body of another girl on her shoulder.

The body was clad in a blue suit and a pair of brown-stockinged legs dangled limply. The motorman slowed up her car. One glance at the head of the object and he threw on the power again.

With an indignant look the girl with her burden marched on her way. She was Miss Annie Brown, president of the junior class of Forest Park university, who was carrying her effigy to a grocery store half a mile away to burn it. By burning her own effigy Miss Brown established a precedent. As the climax in the class fight which had been on between the junior and senior classes for three days, the seniors had abstracted a dress of Miss Brown, stuffed it with paper and rags and hung the effigy on the high oak in the front yard of the university.

The effigy was discovered early in the morning by Miss Gertrude Schneider, vice-president of the juniors. After heroic efforts she managed to cut it down. The question was what to do with it before the entire school saw it. It was then that Miss Brown decided on the visit to a grocery up the tracks. None of the seniors saw the disposal of the effigy, and all were mystified at seeing the oak tree relieved of its burden.

SAVED FROM AN OPERATION

How Mrs. Reed of Peoria, Ill., Escaped The Surgeon's Knife.

Peoria, Ill.—"I wish to let every one know what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. For two years I suffered. The doctor said I had a tumor and the only remedy was the surgeon's knife. My mother bought me Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and today I am a well and healthy woman. For months I suffered from inflammation, and your Sanative Wash relieved me. I am glad to tell anyone what your medicines have done for me. You can use my testimonial in any way you wish, and I will be glad to answer letters."—Mrs. CHRISTINA REED, 105 Mound St., Peoria, Ill.

Mrs. Lynch Also Avoided Operation.

Jessup, Pa.—"After the birth of my fourth child, I had severe organic inflammation. I would have such terrible pains that it did not seem as though I could stand it. This kept up for three long months, until two doctors decided that an operation was needed.

"Then one of my friends recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and after taking it for two months I was a well woman."—Mrs. JOSEPH A. LYNCH, Jessup, Pa.

Women who suffer from female ills should try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, one of the most successful remedies the world has ever known, before submitting to a surgical operation.

A Grasp of the Hand.

There are times when a grasp of the hand is almost a sacred thing. In sorrow it may impart comfort or convey sympathy more effectively than words. Again, it may be a warrant of the reliability of friendship or a pledge of honor; also an expression of approval or of admiration. Did you ever hear of a man's growing lean by the reading of "Romeo and Juliet" or blowing his brains out because Desdemona was maligned?—Oliver Wendell Holmes.

American Turpentine.

American turpentine is obtained chiefly from the longleaf pine, and the immense importance to which the trade in naval stores has come may be shown by the fact that in order to supply the demand for spirits of turpentine, rosin and other products of the pine tree's resin there must be invaded annually 800,000 acres of virgin forest to make good the decreasing yield of the trees already tapped.

Avoid Covetousness.

Refrain from covetousness and thy estate shall prosper.—Pilate.

A Good Defense.

"How could you tell that ugly girl she had a complexion like peaches and cream?" "No lie about that. I meant yellow peaches and sour cream."

HELPS FOR SWINE BREEDER

Several Little Facts Picked Up In and Around Hog Yard That Will Aid Any Farmer.

(By PROF. L. SWINEY.)

Scientists now say that the use of virus on pigs from a sow that has been treated for cholera by the use of virus is seldom affected by the disease. They thrive better than other pigs if they are treated with the virus and in that case are seldom attacked. The pig made pot-bellied by feeding on straw or running on pasture without any grain is an easy victim of disease, because it is lacking in nutrition.

Dollar for dollar, middlings and corn, milk and corn or corn and alfalfa or clover is a far cheaper feed than the corn alone.

Young pigs suffer from indigestion through over-feeding or from feeding on one ration alone just the same as young children do.

Pigs, and, in fact, all hogs, should have ready access at all times to salt and ashes. Charred corn cobs are always excellent.

The reason why hogs so eagerly devour coal, ashes, rotten wood and such material, is because they do not have, while in close confinement, the material their system demands. At large they root such material from the ground.

The farmer who grows a liberal supply of roots for his hogs seldom has much trouble from the ordinary diseases to which swine are subject.

A sow eats her pigs because she has been improperly fed during pregnancy. We never knew of a sow having this habit if she had been allowed to run in the pasture, or whose litters had been varied and which contained plenty of green and succulent feed.

LIME SHOWER IS SURE CURE

Outbreak of Gapes Among the Chickens May Be Expected Where Yarded on the Same Ground.

When the first chick shows symptoms of the gapes, stretching the neck and gasping for breath, place the entire brood in a small box, cover it with a piece of burlap and sprinkle dry, air-slaked lime over the burlap cover. Gently shake the cloth, so the lime will sift through and thoroughly fill the air inside the box.

The aim is to have the chicks breathe this lime-laden air, which is sure death to the worms lodged in the chick's windpipe. After two or three minutes, the cover may be removed, and the chicks returned to the hen or brooder. T. Z. Richey, in the Farm and Home, says repeat every evening until all symptoms of the trouble have disappeared.

Where chicks have been yarded on the same ground for two or three years in succession, one may expect an outbreak of gapes, unless efforts are made to thoroughly renovate the soil and kill the worms in the ground. The safest plan is to move the runs to new ground each season. Where this is not possible, the ground should be spaded frequently and thoroughly limed.

Bees and Fruit.

The ideal fruit farm, with its orchards of apples, cherries, pears and plums, its shade trees and its gardens, is hardly complete without at least a few stands of bees. Properly managed they will not only add to the profits of their owner, but supply his table with an abundance of the most luxurious of all delicacies and add materially to the fertility of his berries and fruits by the pollen-distributing habits that these insects possess. This important feature, however, is generally omitted, or carried on in such a way as to result in very little profit and a great deal of trouble, and usually results in failure in the end, and this in face of the fact that it might easily be made one of the most profitable and fascinating of the fruit grower's occupations.—D. W. Otis.

Garden Seeds.

Too late now, but next fall dig your seed potatoes with your own hands, picking out the choice ones from the very best hills.

As a rule it does not pay to save garden seed because varieties are apt to become mixed, and professional seedsmen can give us better seed than we can grow ourselves.

It is all very well to experiment with seeds from choice specimens of fruit or vegetables from one's own garden, but in the long run seeds from a reliable firm will give better satisfaction. A possible exception is tomato seeds. Very often we can get better seed from choice specimens in our own garden than anywhere else.

Inoculation for Legumes.

It is generally understood at present by all farmers who grow legumes that these crops can only be grown satisfactorily where the soil is thoroughly inoculated with the bacteria which form the tubercles or nodules upon the roots. Some soils seem to be naturally inoculated, while others must be artificially inoculated either with soil from thoroughly inoculated fields or by the use of pure cultures.

Double Profit From Feeding.

Feeding cattle gives not only a profit on the feed produced on the farm, but it supplies the farm with manure which is greatly desired in progressive farming.

Two Important Points.

Two very important points in raising poultry are to keep plenty of grit before your fowls and not to overfeed them.

MONTE CARLO Unique Principality

BAY OF MONACO

THE principality of Monaco is the most densely populated country in the world. It consists practically of one large town, though this in itself is divided into old Monaco, lying round sweeping shores of the bay of that name, and Monte Carlo proper, the pleasure resort on the high eastern promontory of the bay. The whole place is dominated by the great white establishment of the Societe des Bains de Mer, as M. Blanc chooses to call his gaming house.

The principality is, theoretically, an entirely independent state, with its own ruler, the distinguished explorer and scientist, the prince of Monaco. It has a tiny army of about 126 men, a navy consisting of a royal yacht and a couple of auxiliary vessels, and its government buildings and government offices, clustering around the palace on the promontory opposite to the Casino. It also has a national opera house, national museums and a national picture gallery.

The inhabitants are in the happy position of having neither taxes nor rates to pay. The whole principality is supported by the subsidy received from the great white building which stands at the edge of the promontory, fronting the principal public gardens—a huge white sepulcher of ruined gamblers' souls and lost hopes.

But let us pay a visit to the Casino itself. On the steps there is a constant coming and going of almost all the famous personages of Europe. Grand rulers and musical comedy actresses rub shoulders under the portico. Painters and princes, authors and autocrats, statesmen, merchants, adventurers and great ladies mix in one heterogeneous crowd with the French and Italian peasants who come here to risk their little all, the savings of a lifetime, in a wild, vain endeavor to find a short cut to wealth.

Only Foreigners Gamble. Before we are admitted to the gambling rooms we have a little ceremony to go through. On the left of the portico as you enter is a small office, and here we must apply for an entrance card. Nominally, we go through the ceremony of being elected a member of the Cercle des Etrangers, or Foreigners' club, a vast amorphous organization which alone has the right of using the gambling rooms. The object of this is to give effect to the Monagasque law, which forbids any subject of the principality from entering the establishment, a law which shows that the rulers of the little country, while quite prepared to live on the follies of foreigners, take good care that their own people shall not be entrapped by the temptation in their midst. All we have to do, as a matter of fact, is give our full name and address, and state our age, because no person under years of discretion is admitted. We are handed a card which admits us to the rooms.

The first time we walk across the great entrance hall to the glass doors of the gambling rooms we are scanned by a whole posse of international detectives, as well as by attendants of the Casino itself, trained especially, and selected for their ability to remember faces. This is the first and only time we shall have to show our card. A uniformed official, who looks at it, scans us closely, and within a minute or two every one of those detectives and attendants knows our names and faces. If a message or a note be sent into the rooms for us it will be brought straight to us without a moment's hesitation.

As we approach the swing doors we are scanned by two attendants, whose special duty it is to see that persons using the Casino are decorously dressed; and if we be Britons we shall probably be pulled up short for having our trousers turned up. To most people this appears a ludicrous regulation; but it has a very good explanation, as its object is to prevent the possibility of a swindler "accidentally" brushing money off the tables on the chance of two or three pounds falling into the hem of his trousers, a trick which was frequently resorted to in the early days of the Casino.

When finally we are through the doors we find ourselves in a series of gorgeously decorated and brilliantly lit saloons. Coming in from the brilliant sunlight, the effect of the artificial light is bizarre in the extreme. The place is crowded with richly dressed, well-to-do people, gathered in close throngs around enormous green baize tables. Raised above them on high chairs at each side of the tables are the chefs-de-partie, or controllers of the play at the table.

here is a strange subdued atmosphere about the whole place. Despite the enormous numbers present there is practically no conversation, and the little there is carried on almost in undertones. The few who are moving about do so quietly and softly, as if not to disturb some strange rite. There is a constant, monotonous, unbroken hum, in which the clinking of coins, the movements of players, the rattle and roll of the roulette and the scraping of the croupiers or money rakes all blend into one prolonged low murmur. Above this rise, in constant iteration, the sharp voices of the croupiers calling on the players to stake their money or announcing the result of a coup.

Oil Lamps Used.

We make our way to one of the crowds around the table. We find that in the center is the great roulette. Opposite it on each side sit the two roulette attendants, who actually spin the roulette, and four croupiers. Behind them on each side are the two chefs-de-partie on their high chairs. At the end of the long tables there are two more croupiers. The green baize of the tables is marked out with the numbers and spaces for staking money, and all around it the regular frequenter is seated, probably in the same places as they occupy day after day. Behind them and between the seated players on each side have are crowded four and five deep. All over the tables are little stacks of silver and gold and packets of notes in a seeming confusion, but the quick eyes of the croupiers mark each stake as it is placed, and know almost invariably the player who has placed it, so that disputes of any kind are of the rarest occurrence. Most of the seated players on each side have in front of them note books or memorandum tablets, on which they are busily working out figures and calculations—system players, who make a business of their amusement.

The lamps immediately over the tables are, curiously enough, in this place of modernity, old-fashioned oil lamps, and attendants move quietly about attending to them and replacing them as they burn out. An attempt was made in the very early days of electric light to carry out an ingenious raid on the Casino by cutting the wires, and in all probability the attempt would have been successful had its perpetrators been a little better acquainted with the habits of the Casino. The whole place was plunged in darkness.

Now, it was during this confusion that the accomplices of the wire cutter, standing at each table, were to have scooped up whatever money they could lay their hands on. Unfortunately for them, but fortunately for the public, the Casino authorities were a little further sighted than they imagined. Look up at the arches in the gallery which runs round the rooms. Here and there you will see a little spark of light. These reveal the whereabouts of powerful bull's-eye lanterns, primitive searchlights, already focussed on the different tables, and so arranged that they can be instantly turned up by one official. In the case referred to the moment the wires had been cut these searchlights were turned on, and almost before the confusion had arisen the tables were each brilliantly illuminated in the midst of the surrounding darkness.

Having taken in a general impression of the place and got some idea of the method of play, we ventured to hazard a stake. Five francs is the minimum allowed at the roulette table. The highest stake on an even chance is 600 francs, and the minimum stakes on the other chances are so regulated that this is the largest amount that can be won by any one stake; but, of course, one player may have any number of stakes on the different chances. So that practically no limit is placed on the amount that can be won by a single coup, though the bank reserves to itself the right not to pay out more than $35,000 of its own money on any one coup at one table.

The Adapter. David Belasco at a dinner in New York condemned certain playwrights who steal shamelessly from their foreign confreres' successes.

"I sprang a fable on one of these scoundrels the other day," said Mr. Belasco. "I told him that a playwright of his type awoke in the dead of night, and saw a masked man with dark lantern bending over his dressing table.

"What are you doing there?" the playwright thundered. "Stealing?" "Oh, no," replied the robber. "Oh, no, sir. Merely adapting."

Frankness. "When we speak of the hope of conviction by which we live we can at least do so gravely and frankly . . . we are too apt to turn the edge of disagreement by banter; too apt to shrink away from what we really most care to say . . . or to hear through dread of a smile; too ready to distrust our own sincerity because of the inevitable ebb and flow of our feelings and so to throw a veil of something like cynicism over the subjects we feel most sacred."—Caroline Stephen.

Failed With Staff of Life.

The pupils of a girls' high school in a Pennsylvania town had a bread-making contest the other day. It was a great success, for the druggists and doctors of the town did a rushing business the next day. One of the bakers of the town got hold of one of the soggy, sour, half-baked high school loaves and put it in his show window as an awe-inspiring example of what bread should not be like.—Bakers' Weekly.

Time Brings Improvement.

Fashions in typography change like all things mortal, but the typographical fashions of 1865, as illustrated in the American Printer by a facsimile of the invitation card for the first typographic dinner, might well have been changed before they were adopted. The work of type foundries and printers has certainly improved greatly in taste since the times when those crudely ornamental designs were popular.

Something to Think About.

If a carp can live a century and a half and a pike live to be 267, why shouldn't a piker live to be 1000? Admitting that an elephant deserves to live to be 100, and that one tusker has lived to be 350, and considering that a white-headed vulture has survived captivity almost fifteen decades, and that the cat who keeps you awake at night may not expire for 20 years, did Methuselah have much to boast of, after all?

By the customs of our country, if any person under prosecution for a capital crime did not appear, an officer was sent to his door in the morning to summon him by sound of trumpet, and the judges would never pass sentence before so public a citation. Vehicles in Burma.

The styles mostly used in Burma are two-wheeled dog cars and buggies with syc's seat or step behind. The tops to the buggies must have closed sides (hood shaped) and be capable of being turned back. All vehicles have rubber tires and are fitted with foot bells. Local made buggies sell on the average for $165, while those imported from India sell as high as $400.

New Roofing Material.

Cinder concrete is in favor for roofing, not only because of its substantial character, but because nails may be driven into it. The nails take a good hold and are preserved in place. The material is prepared in eight-foot lengths and, as it may be nailed in place, it is very convenient for roofs of large buildings such as armories, halls and rinks.

Great Work Done by Boys.

Painting is not the only art in which masterpieces have been produced by mere boys. Although it was not published until a year later, it is probable that Kents wrote his famous Ode to Autumn in his sixteenth year, and, indeed, all his five great odes, among the greatest in any language, before he attained legal manhood. He died at twenty-five, so that all the masterpieces which came from his pen may be regarded as the production of a boy.

Marks Historic Spot.

Some 20 years ago Professor Patrick Geddes made the suggestion that a memorial should be erected on the Esplanade of Edinburgh castle to mark the spot where, in the days of a dark and evil superstition, witches and warlocks were done to death by burning. The committee of the Outlook tower, Edinburgh, have not forgotten Professor Geddes' suggestion, and they have presented a tablet fountain which was unveiled on the Esplanade.

The dread epidemic of rabies is becoming so wide spread through the state that most places are adopting drastic means for its suppression, while at the same time young ladies of Los Angeles are parading their pets in an effort to arouse sympathy against muzzling. Pic-up such misplaced sympathy.

WHEN reading of the numerous robberies of banks, postoffices, stores and shops, has it ever occurred to you why so few printing offices and shops are ever entered for the purpose of making a haul? Such a thought probably has never entered your mind and if it had you would simply have wondered. There's a reason. Burglars and bank robbers are wise to the ins and outs of all businesses and know the size of the printer's "pile." He knows that it is the home of the "devil" who goes about the sanctum with a "shooting stick" looking for "scraps." All bits go to the "hell-box" and Mr. Burglar knows he'll get his if enters such a place and pie of double leaded stuff is the most valuable matter that he can carry away. Printshops don't have much attraction for the robber.

THE foreign commerce of the United States for the fiscal year 1912 was greater than ever before, new high records being established for both imports and exports. The value of merchandise entering free of duty also reached an unprecedented total.

The year's trade figures made public by the commerce and labor department's bureau of statistics show that the imports were $1,653,426,174 and the exports $2,200,222,088 in value. Imports exceeded the former high record, that of 1910, by about $100,000,000, while exports exceeded the 1911 record by nearly $155,000,000. These totals added to the value of the trade of the United States with Porto Rico and Hawaii would make a grand total of approximately $4,000,000,000.

THE importers of Sicilian and Italian lemons have been working for two years, with a big "slush fund" to influence Congress to reduce the tariff on lemons. Partly because the lemon growers knew their danger and actively fought for their industrial lives, the importers have not yet succeeded, although a free lemon amendment was tacked on to the cotton bill. But the olive oil importers, who submitted a brief and worked hard for a reduction of the duty, succeeded in getting the olive oil item in the chemical schedule reduced to what they said was a satisfactory figure to them—a reduction equal to 40 per cent. The Senate killed the bill, but the fight will be renewed next winter.

WE are again brought face to face with the bare facts concerning the inadequacy of our excuse for fire protection. As a matter of fact this town has no fire-protection that protects, except at the Ainsley Cannery, which is very good for its immediate vicinity. The large chemical engine will serve for a bonfire or any fire when starting but is useless after the conflagration has gained a headway. It has often been said that one side of Campbell avenue must be wiped out before suitable protection can be obtained. It is up to the citizens of the town to see to it that a protection is provided that may prevent such a destruction. "Do something worth while and do it now," should be the slogan until we get this much needed protection.

A NEW interpretation was given the Otis-Walker anti-gambling law when Police Judge Shortall, deviating from the opinion of his colleagues on the police bench, ruled that it was not necessary in his judgment to prove that a certain race was run in order to convict a person of betting on that contest in violation of the state law. The fact that two men had wagered money on a race and had received receipts for that money, held Judge Shortall, was sufficient evidence that the anti-betting law had been violated.

THE citizens of Sunnyvale have subscribed $4,000 toward the establishment of a window glass factory. They will raise $6,000 more to be put with an equal amount by Mr. Hurrell—Standard. That's the boosting that counts.

Exposition Notes

There will be no Igorrotes at the 1915 Universal Exposition. The Department of Exhibits is in receipt of a communication from the Philippines setting forth that fact, and also stating that one of the clauses of the bill passed by the Philippine Assembly setting aside a sum of money for its participation provides; "that no part of such funds shall be expended in exhibiting people belonging to the non-Christian tribes."

San Francisco, July 31: Mayor William J. Gaynor of New York City has accepted the invitation of San Francisco and the Panama-Pacific International Exposition to visit this city next month. While here many honors will be shown the distinguished Chief Executive of the metropolis of the United States. Mayor Gaynor will spend ten days in California and while here will journey to the "Grove" to witness the annual "jinks" of the Bohemian Club. He will be taken over the Exposition site and various functions will be arranged in his honor by the municipal authorities and Exposition Directors. This is Mayor Gaynor's first visit to California since his election to office. He has always expressed a deep interest in the coming World's Fair and is anxious to learn more about the preparations for this great project.

The huge flag-pole presented to the Panama-Pacific International Exposition by the citizens of Astoria, reached this city in one of the giant rafts of the Hammond Lumber Company, and has been towed to the Exposition site at Harbor View. It was sent by Mayor Henderson of Astoria, as that city's contribution to the wonderful Exposition that is to be held here in 1915. The pole was originally intended for the Astoria Centennial Celebration, but it was so long and heavy that it was impossible to raise it. The dimensions of the flag-pole as given by an expert timber scaler are as follows: "Douglas Fir, a perfect piece of timber; base 56 inches, top 23 inches; estimated weight 93,061 pounds. Cubic contents 1958.52 cubic feet; contains 23,515.46 solid lumber feet; length over all 246 feet. The special flag, which is to be flown from this flag-pole, is to be furnished by the citizens of Astoria. It is planned to hold appropriate ceremonies when the pole is raised and old glory is unfurled from its lofty peak."

In reply to several queries as to the price dealers may ask for text books sold to the school public, State Supt. of Public Instruction Hyatt today held that no more than the exact price fixed by the state board of education may be charged by dealers.

Last week was a record breaker for the shipment of fruit in the history of Cal. Fifty-five cars a day loaded and shipped out of Sacramento exceeds the average shipments for any previous week by 15 cars. Practically all the fruit was pears and plums and the 329 carloads were valued at $400,000.

Remember that registration closes tomorrow, Aug. 3rd, and in order to vote at the primary election Sept. 3rd and the general election, Nov. 5th, your name must have been registered since Jan. 1, 1912, so that it will appear on the great register of the county. Do it now.

The Water Pageant at Santa Cruz last week was a grand success. Thousands of state and eastern visitors thronged the city and enjoyed the many forms of entertainment. A steady throng of sight-seers visited the U. S. Cruisers anchored in the bay and in the evening immense crowds watched the beautiful floats on the river and enjoyed the sham battle and fireworks.

The August number of Sunset, which contains an extensive write-up of the Santa Clara Valley is out—and it is certainly a beautiful tribute to our lovely valley. Some of the illustrations are in color and others in brown tones with a very comprehensive description of the beauties and practical advantages of this section under the title: "The Valley of Heart's Delight."
